SERVICES

Advocacy: The Advocacy team at Survivors' Network provide signposting & practical advocacy support for people of any gender, aged 14 and over, who have experienced sexual violence and are thinking about reporting to the police, or who have an open police investigation, or who have concerns about a case that has previously been reported to the police. If you are referring someone to the Advocacy (Independent Sexual Violence Advisors - ISVA) Service, you will need to go via the Sexual Assault Referral Centre - <http://www.saturncentre.org/>. The referral form can be sourced by emailing: sc-tr.saturncentre@nhs.net. This is also the email address to send completed forms to. Should the person you are working with need legal support and emotional support, accessing the ISVA service will also put them on a specific waiting list for the Counselling service.

Counselling: Our specialist counselling service offers therapeutic support to survivors, aged 14 and over, of sexual abuse, rape and unwanted or confusing sexual experiences. There is currently a waiting list operating for this service. For more information contact: counselling@survivorsnetwork.org.uk

If you are referring someone to the Counselling service, give them our email address or phone number and we can complete a self-referral.

When someone has been raped or sexually assaulted, they obviously need a great deal of support from the people around them. This could include friends and family members as well as people like counsellors, the police, doctors and so on. Knowing what to say or do can sometimes be hard but there are some key ways in which you can help:

Listen to what they have to say in their own time and try to understand.

Believe. People very rarely lie about rape or sexual abuse. Why would they? It is important to believe what they are saying.

Respect their feelings and decisions. Crying can be part of the healing process.

Remember it is not their fault - no-one asks to be sexually assaulted or abused and no-one deserves it. No-one can be blamed for being unable to prevent it.

Recognise the courage it takes for someone to speak. It takes a great deal to face up to fears and to talk about any experience of sexual violence. It can be important for you to acknowledge the courage it has taken for them to speak about what has happened.

Don't take control. Sexual violence makes people feel invaded, changed and out of control; try to imagine how this feels, and try to do what helps them rather than what makes you feel better. Listen to what they want. It is crucial that they be able to make their own decisions and regain influence over what happens in their lives in order to rebuild trust and strength. Ask them how they want to be helped, and in trying to do this you'll help rebuild their trust.
